School observations

Across English and science, LM misses multi-part directions, leaves question sections blank, loses worksheets, and requires prompts to begin independent work. Difficulties have been evident across two school years and are not confined to one subject.

Functional impact

Six assignments were late this semester despite demonstrated understanding in discussion. Teachers report that reduced workload, written instructions, and staged deadlines improve completion. Peer relationships are appropriate.

Activity and behaviour

LM is quiet, remains seated, and rarely calls out. Leg movement and doodling are observed but do not disrupt others.

Strengths and contradictions

LM contributes original ideas, responds well to feedback, and produces strong artwork. Her presentation appears more impaired at school than described by her mother, possibly because school requires more independent organisation.
